There is no specific format to cite an appendix in APA, so we adapted the format of a chapter to fit an appendix. To cite an appendix in a reference entry in APA style 6th edition include the following elements: Author(s) of the appendix: Give the last name and initials (e. g. Watson, J. D.) of up to seven authors with the last name preceded by an ampersand (&). For eight or more authors include the first six names followed by an ellipsis (...) and add the last author's name. Year of publication: Give the year in brackets followed by a full stop. Appendix title: Only the first letter of the first word and proper nouns are capitalized. Editor(s) or Author of the book: Give the name of the author or editor of the book. If it is an editor, write the name (e.g. J. Smith), followed by (Ed.) or (Eds.) respectively. If not available, omit this part. @Title of the book: Book titles are italicized. Only the first letter of the first word and proper nouns are capitalised. Page numbers: Give the full page range. Place of publication: List the city and the US state using the two-letter abbreviation. Spell out country names if outside of the UK or the USA. Publisher: Give the name of the publisher but omit terms, such as Publishers, Co., and Inc. Retain the words Books and Press. Here is the basic format for a reference list entry of an appendix in APA style 6th edition: Author(s) of the appendix. (Year of publication). Appendix title. In Editor(s) or Author of the book. Title of the book. (pp. Page numbers). Place of publication: Publisher. To cite an appendix in a reference entry in APA style 7th edition include the following elements: Author(s) of the appendix: Give the last name and initials (e. g. Watson, J. D.) of up to 20 authors with the last name preceded by an ampersand (&). For 21 or more authors include the first 19 names followed by an ellipsis (...) and add the last author's name. Year of publication: Give the year in brackets followed by a full stop. Appendix title: Only the first letter of the first word and proper nouns are capitalized. Editor(s) or Author of the book: Give the last name and initials (e. g. Watson, J. D.) of up to 20 authors with the last name preceded by an ampersand (&). For 21 or more editors include the first 19 names followed by an ellipsis (...) and the last editor's name. End with Ed. or Eds., respectively, in round brackets. Title of the book: Book titles are italicized. Only the first letter of the first word and proper nouns are capitalised. Edition number: Include information about the edition if it is not the first. Page numbers: Give the full page range. Publisher: Give the name of the publisher but omit terms, such as Publishers, Co., and Inc. Retain the words Books and Press. Here is the basic format for a reference list entry of an appendix in APA style 7th edition: Author(s) of the appendix. (Year of publication). Appendix title. In Editor(s) or Author of the book. In Title of the book. (Edition number ed., pp. Page numbers). Publisher. APA reference list examples: Take a look at our reference list examples that demonstrate the APA style guidelines for an appendix citation in action: An appendix in a book with one author: Reagan, T. G. (2010). Appendix II: Statement on the recognition of the national sign languages of the deaf. In Language policy and planning for sign languages (pp. 189-191). Washington, DC: Gallaudet UP. An appendix in a book with two editors: Stotturp, J. G., & McEvoy, L. A. (Eds.). (2003). Appendix IV: Web sites for culture collections. In Live feeds in marine aquaculture (p. 307-308). Oxford, UK: Blackwell Science. An appendix in a book with two editors: Stotturp, J. G., & McEvoy, L. A. (Eds.). (2003). Appendix IV: Web sites for culture collections. In Live feeds in marine aquaculture (p. 307-308). Blackwell Science. Automatic citations in seconds: This article reflects the 7th edition guidelines of the APA Publication Manual. An appendix is a section at the end of an academic text where you include extra information that doesn't fit into the main text. The plural of appendix is "appendices." In an APA Style paper, appendices are placed at the very end, after the reference list. Do I need an appendix? You don't always need to include any appendices. An appendix should present information that supplements the reader's understanding of your research but is not essential to the argument of your paper. Essential information is included in the main text. For example, you might include some of the following in an appendix: You should refer to each appendix? An appendix contains information that supplements the reader's understanding of your research but is not essential to it. For example: Something is only worth including as an appendix if you refer to information from it at some point in the text (e.g. quoting from an interview transcript). If you don't, it should probably be removed. APA style offers writers footnotes and appendices as spaces where additional, relevant information might be shared within a document; this resource offers a quick overview of format and content concerns for these segments of a document. Should additional clarification be necessary, it is always recommended that writers reach out to the individual overseeing their work (i.e., instructor, editor, etc.). For your convenience, a student sample paper is included below; please note the document is filled with Lorem Ipsum placeholder text and references to footnotes and appendices are highlighted. Additional marginal notes also further explain specific portions of the example. Footnotes: Footnotes are supplementary details printed at the bottom of the page pertaining to a paper's content or copyright information. This supporting text can be utilized in any type of APA paper to support the body paragraphs. Content-Based Footnotes: Utilizing footnotes to provide supplementary detail can enrich the body text and reinforce the main argument of the paper. Footnotes may also direct readers to an alternate source for more detail on a topic. Though content footnotes can be useful in providing additional context, it is detrimental to include tangential or convoluted information. Footnotes should detail a focused subject; lengthier sections of text are better suited for the body paragraphs. Acknowledging Copyright: When citing long quotations, images, tables, data, or commercially published questionnaires in-text, it is important to credit the copyright information in a footnote. Functioning much like an in-text citation, a footnote copyright attribution provides credit to the original source and must also be included in a reference list. A copyright citation is needed for both direct reprinting as well as adaptations of content, and these may require express permission from the copyright owner. Formatting Footnotes: Each footnote and its corresponding callout is referenced. Alternatively, a footnote's page could be created to follow the reference page. When formatting footnotes in the latter manner, center and bold the label "Footnotes" then record each footnote as a double-spaced and indented paragraph. Place the corresponding superscripted number in front of each footnote and separate the numeral from the following text with a single space. Formatting Copyright Information: To provide credit for images, tables, or figures pulled from an outside source, include the accreditation statement at the end of the note for the visual. Copyright acknowledgements for long quotations or questionnaires should simply be placed in a footnote at the bottom of the page. When formatting a copyright accreditation, utilize the following format: Establish if the content was reprinted or adapted by using language such as "from" for directly copied material or "adapted from" for material that has been modified. Include the content's title, author, year of publication, and source. Cite the copyright holder and year of copyright or indicate that the source is public domain or licensed under Creative Commons. If express permission was required to reprint the material, include a statement indicating that permission was acquired. Appendices: When introducing supplementary content that may not fit within the body of a paper, an appendix can be included to help readers better understand the material without distracting from the text itself. Primarily used to introduce research materials, specific details of a study, or participant demographics, appendices are generally concise and only incorporate relevant content. Much like with footnotes, appendices may require an acknowledgement of copyright and, if data is cited, an adherence to the privacy policies that protect participant identities. Formatting Appendices: An appendix should be created on its own individual page labelled "Appendix" and followed by a title on the next line that describes the subject of the appendix. These headings should be centered and bolded at the top of the page and written in title case. If there are multiple appendices, each should be labelled with a capital letter and referenced in-text by its specific title (for example, "see Appendix B"). All appendices should follow references, footnotes, and any tables or figures included at the end of the document. Text Appendices Appendices should be formatted in traditional paragraph style and may incorporate text, figures, tables, equations, or footnotes. In an appendix, all figures, tables, and other visuals should be labelled with the letter of the corresponding appendix followed by a number indicating the order in which each appears. For example, a table labelled "Table B1" would be the first table in Appendix B. If there is only one appendix in the document, the visuals should still be labelled with the letter A and a number to differentiate them from those contained in the paper itself (for example, "Figure A3" is the third figure in the singular appendix, which is not labelled with a letter in the heading). Table or Figure Appendices When an appendix solely contains a table or figure, the title of the figure or table should be substituted with the title of the appendix. For example, if Appendix B only includes a figure, the figure should be labelled "Appendix B" rather than "Figure B1", as it would be named if there were multiple figures included. If an appendix does not contain text but includes numerous figures or table, the appendix should be formatted like a text appendix. The appendix would receive a name and label, and each figure or table would be given a corresponding letter and number. For example, if Appendix C contains two tables and one figure, these visuals would be labelled "Table C1", "Table C2", and "Figure C1" respectively.
